Will you give a year end gift today?

Dear D Larissa,

I remember when I would pick up a phone and hear a dial tone. Or walk to a neighbor’s house instead of sending a text.

I treasure a phone call, a hug and long hours of conversation on a front porch. Today, these experiences can feel few and far between.

In many ways—especially during these last two years—we have lost our physical connection. But in other ways, we are more connected than ever.

When you give a gift, you create a connection and share love with a neighbor halfway around the world.

You help a family who is facing a food crisis and wondering how they will overcome drought. You welcome a mother and daughter to safe shelter after they've fled a war-torn home. You help a student receive the school supplies she needs to succeed.

When you give a gift, you reach across the ocean to help your neighbor around the world. That's connection. That's love.

Will you give a gift on this last day of 2022?

Peace and light,
