Fashion is like pizza...That might seem like a stretch but have you ever really compared the two? Let's take pizza for example. Have you ever really gotten sick of it, like ate it once and that's enough for you (there may be a few) but my guess would be that the next time someone suggests getting pizza you'll jump on board. Even if you're full after two slices, you'll try to cram in a third. It's addictive, it's comforting, and it can become an obsession.

Now compare that to fashion. After you purchase that dream purse I doubt you'll say "That's it, this is the only bag I'll need for the rest of my life." One day you'll be window shopping and you'll see a flash of red, something crafted from supple leather. It will call out to you to take a closer look. You'll turn it over in your hands and see the subtle details, the artistry. You'll justify to yourself why you need another, and you'll stuff that purse next to your other five when you get back home.

I've never had a lousy slice make me want to give up pizza. You know the slices, the skimpy frozen ones lacking any zest—the ones that you find buried in the frozen foods aisle at your local grocery store. There have been many “stay in” nights where that has popped up on the menu, and after every frozen pizza I always look forward to more. Pizza is accessible, it's everywhere and it's fun to try out different kinds, even when you have a favorite.

Doesn't that sound a lot like an outfit? Have you had a couple looks that upon returning home you say “Ah yes, that's why I've never worn that before.” It's all a part of the process. You'll have some great outfits and you'll have some “needs improvement” outfits but don't let the ones that didn't work throw you off your game. Learn from it and continue to try new flavors of style.

“The fun polka dots of Pepperoni, the simplicity of Margherita and the monochromatic color scheme of Bianca are just a few trends that come to mind.”

Pizza not only tastes great but it looks amazing too. The fun polka dots of Pepperoni, the simplicity of Margherita and the monochromatic color scheme of Bianca are just a few trends that come to mind. Not to mention the splashes of color each ingredient brings to the pie, red, yellow, green—really it's limitless and you can mix them in any way you want. Pizza is extremely customizable, make it how you like it. Pick your favorite pieces and sprinkle them all as toppings.

Fashion lives on patterns, prints and pops of color! You can follow trends but it's all about how you individualize them, how you wear it yourself. Personalize your look by mixing and matching your favorite items. Load on the accessories. Wear it the way you like it! Try new trends or wear that outfit that always gets you compliments. Most importantly have fun...and have your fill!
