Background

Summary

Jonathan Carbutti is a 15 year veteran of the Connecticut real estate industry, specializing in residential real estate, investment properties, multi-unit income properties and bank owned/REO properties. Jonathan is a real estate broker whose primary commitment is empowering buyers and sellers by arming them with an insider's knowledge of the real estate market and a positive approach to the changes they're facing.

His hands-on, personal approach to client care fast-tracked Jonathan to the top one percent of realtors in the Wallingford/North Haven and surrounding areas, based on volume.

Jonathan grew up in Wallingford with a realtor father who started Carbutti & Co. in 1986. After graduating from Southern Connecticut State University in 1995, Jonathan moved to Japan to sharpen and expand his knowledge of Bujinkan Ninjutsu, a Japanese martial arts discipline he'd been studying for years. His experiences in Japan significantly shaped Jonathan's career as a realtor; he embraced "Kaizen," a Japanese philosophy that promotes the perspective of continuous improvement and "change for the better." Jonathan is highly respected by peers and colleagues for his accommodating and motivational Kaizen business management style.

In Japan Jonathan met Pittsburgh-born Caryn Holupoka, who would later become his wife. In 1997, the couple moved back to Wallingford to raise a family (daughter Ally is 11 and son Julian is eight), and launch Jonathan's real estate career at Carbutti & Co. Jonathan bought the company from his father in May 2010, wasting no time in administering his personal and managerial skills, his experience, and his accessible style to maintain Carbutti & Company's success at a time when the housing market was in full tailspin.

Jonathan launched the firm's high-tech, interactive website earlier this year, featuring consumer-centric technology tools for showcasing property and home listings in New Haven County, Shoreline Area, Hartford County or Middlesex County.
