

Silence of Sirens & Tritons

A POEM BY ABIGAIL MILAM

captivating silence, electric polarity between souls of malevolent nature .
lustful and charming, a simple game of tawdry .
sadistic and stern, complexity at its finest .

the perception is equal in the eyes of each beholder .
yet, they differentiate in denial .
stricken with terror of uncovering their world of ultimate desire .

for it is not the longing of amour propre , or the craving of affinity .
not the satisfaction of allurement, nor the fondness of sentiment .
dive deeper into the realms of their pride, deeper into their world of prestigious worth .

perhaps you may rediscover the certainty of their righteousness .
uncover their veils of ignominy, releasing the shame which lies beneath .
allow it to soar beyond the atmosphere of doubt, and into the stars of surety .

it may spin round and round within destiny .
dismantling the framework of their psyche .
do not fear. do not shy away. for it's just their time .

the siren and the triton, enclosed by the silence .
stripped from their vanity. dissolving into clarity .
a subtle embrace configures from the silhouettes .
their personal tranquility .

