Characteristics and History

Artemis the Greek god of the Hunt, Moon, and Wilderness is just one of many Lunar deities

Besides the Sun, the Moon has been documented and analyzed more than any other luminary. The Moon is nocturnal, feminine, wet, passive and represents our esoteric self-image. Like most of the heavenly bodies, 5000 years ago the Moon is first revered through Nannar Sin the Sumerian deity. The plausibility of earlier accounts, specifically Gobekli Tepe, ancient druids and lost antediluvian civilizations venerating the Moon is high. Even in modern days, the study of the Moon cycle is fascinating, how come hospital emergency rooms are packed on full Moons? If the Moon can withdraw the ocean's tides, what is it doing to our human bodies which comprise 60% water? In history, the Moon has been represented in many pantheons by the Greek

Goddesses Selena and Artemis, the Roman goddess Luna, the Chinese Goddess Chang'e and back to Rome for the Goddess Diana. The Moon is exalted in Taurus and its detriment is in Capricorn and falls in Scorpio. Strong Moon placement and control can result in mental stability and rock-solid intuitive powers. An other-worldly connection exists here that makes the Moons energy unique to those diving deeper into the hidden mysteries. The Moon controls the left eye in the male and the right eye of the female.
