

Kitchen Shelving and Storage You Didn't Know You Needed

You don't need Marie Kondo; you need better shelving and storage space.

Stop trying to get rid of those needed pots because they no longer fit in your cabinets. We all know it's hard to find adequate storage solutions in the kitchen for bulky appliances, cookware, and spices. Here are 3 ideas to help declutter your cabinets and your beautiful countertops!

1: Pots and Pans

Pots and pans have always been hard to store in your kitchen cabinets. We all try to stack them nicely, but eventually the cabinet will become a mess with random lids and a pile of pots. Great news is that there are custom shelves for storing pots and pans without the mess!

There are custom cabinets with drawer-like shelves that can be pulled out for easy access and storage. Don't think your kitchen is large enough for such a fancy cabinet? Don't worry! This cabinet style fits in the space of any other cabinet in your kitchen and can be custom made to fit.

2: Bulky appliances

Bulky appliances take up a lot of countertop space, but they're not so easy to move. Electric mixers can be too heavy, while coffee machines just won't fit anywhere else. What if there was a way to clear your counters without having to move them? Cabinets are a great way to hide the bulky appliances! Most upper cabinets hover above the countertops, but a great way to help hide those bulky appliances is to extend the upper cabinets to touch the countertops. This way, the appliances don't need to be moved in order to make the countertops tidy. Custom made cabinets can be built to hide the bulky appliances with the perfect door to fit your space and hide the clutter.

3: Spices

Storing spices can be hard because there are so many small jars and bottles to organize. There are spice racks that can sit on the countertops or be hung on the wall, but we all know those don't always stay organized. A great solution is to have a spice rack (or drawer) within your kitchen cabinets in order to save space and make organization easier in the future. Some spice drawers are made to hold the spices in place so they don't roll around in the drawer and are easier to see. Meanwhile, some spice drawers can be made to be skinny with shelving to hold all of the spices with no room for them to roll around or get knocked over, all while being tucked away in the cabinets.
