OBJECTS of DESIRE

HOLIDAY WISHLIST

A little holiday inspiration for everyone on your list, including yourself. From standout fashion and beauty finds to thoughtful gifts and everyday luxuries, MOD's seasonal guide is filled with things worth giving, receiving, and adding to your own wishlist!

1

HERMÈS MACAO MAHJONG GAME

SANDY'S FAVORITE

Desire can be competitive. There is something almost cinematic about a game laid out properly: the shuffle of tiles, the small negotiations around the table, the silence before a move. Mahjong has always carried its own choreography - part ritual, part calculation, part theatre.

Hermès turns that ritual into an object in itself. The Macao set opens to reveal rows of engraved wooden tiles, dice and trays, each waiting for hands to disturb their order. Beautiful, yes, but beauty here is only the beginning. Because the real pleasure is in what follows: the clatter of pieces, the gathering of people, the strange intimacy of sitting across from someone while quietly plotting.

An object designed to be handled, rearranged, argued over and returned to again. Perhaps that is the best kind of possession: one that only truly comes alive when everyone else arrives.

2

TRUDON THE SCENTED HAND LOTION

SANDY'S FAVORITE

This hand lotion leaves fragrance where gestures begin -- on fingers, wrists, the places that brush against glass, fabric, skin. Softening becomes secondary to the trace it leaves behind: close, fleeting, almost accidental. Desire, sometimes, is simply what lingers after touch.

VIOLETTE_FR OBJECT DE REFLEXION

SANDY'S FAVORITE

A mirror is never just a mirror. It catches light, mood, vanity, doubt. This object makes that private ritual feel almost talismanic -- less a tool for inspection than an invitation to linger. Something to hold, turn, mark with colour, return to. Beauty, here, is not fixed. It shifts with the light.

3

RÉVIVE X BACH MAI RENEWAL RITUAL 3-PIECE COLLECTION

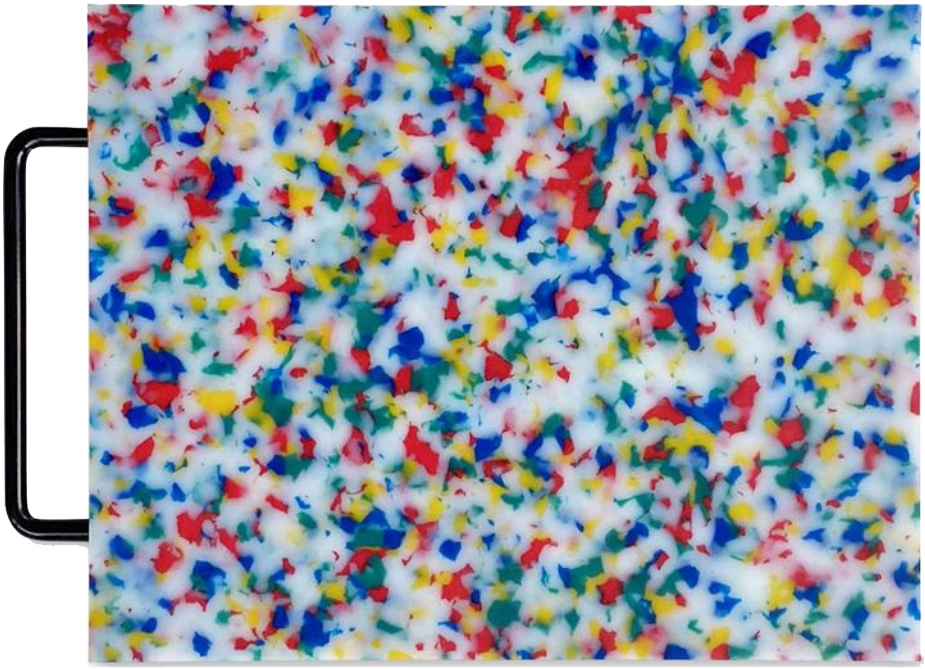

SHANNON'S FAVORITE

The ritual is in the renewal. This limited-edition collection brings RéVive's skincare essentials together with the design sensibility of Bach Mai, pairing a gentle cleanse with nourishing hydration. Three full-sized bestsellers make for a thoughtful gift, or a little luxury worth keeping for yourself.

FREDRICKS AND MAE MULTI CONFETTI CUTTING BOARD

SANDY'S FAVORITE

There is something satisfying about a beautiful surface made to be ruined. This confetti cutting board is built for chopping, staining, scraping and serving -- a riot of color designed to collect evidence of use. Its appeal is in becoming more itself over time.

COMPLETEDWORKS - "THAW" LARGE GLASS JUG

SANDY'S FAVORITE

The desire is in the near-collapse. This jug removes the certainty from glass, letting it slump, stretch and soften into something closer to a gesture than a vessel. Pink, swollen and slightly off-balance, it makes utility feel strangely intimate. A jug, technically. But really, an object suspended between function and surrender.

DANESSA MYRICKS BEAUTY MINI YUMMY SKIN FLUSHED ESSENTIALS: FACE & LIP MAKEUP GIFT SET

SHANNON'S FAVORITE

Beauty is often about the little details: a softer finish, a touch of color, and skin that looks effortlessly polished.

Danessa Myricks Beauty brings five of its bestselling Yummy Skin formulas together in one value set, featuring four shades of Blurring Balm Powder Flushed and the Universal Radiant balm. Designed to smooth the look of pores and fine lines while adding a soft-focus flush, the versatile creams can be worn alone or layered into your makeup routine. With shades ranging from Rosé N Brunch to Spiced Latte, there's plenty of room to play.

A little color for the cheeks, a hint on the lips, or a radiant base to start with—this is the kind of set that makes experimenting with your everyday look feel a little more fun.

L'OBJET X JESSICA MCCORMACK SEA-INSPIRED JEWELS FOR THE HOME

SANDY'S FAVORITE

Desire is rarely practical. That is rather the point. L'OBJET and Jessica McCormack make a persuasive case for the object as seduction: cool metal, pale porcelain, curled forms, glints of gold. Pieces that seem to have washed ashore from a more glamorous world and landed, improbably, on the dining table. There is something deliciously excessive about it all. A shell becomes a vessel. A rope becomes ornament. The useful slips quietly into the beautiful, until the distinction hardly matters.

These are objects with presence. They ask to be picked up, passed around, left out long after dinner is over. Less decoration than temptation; less tableware than talisman. The appeal is in the tension: polished but not precious, playful but never frivolous, familiar shapes made just strange enough to feel newly desirable. Because sometimes the best objects do nothing more complicated than make you want them.

OURA RING 5

9

SHANNON'S FAVORITE

Some of the best accessories do more than complete an outfit.

Oura Ring 5 brings personal wellness into a remarkably small package, combining the look and feel of everyday jewelry with technology designed to offer deeper insights into your health. Forty percent smaller than the previous generation, it features re-engineered sensors for greater accuracy, an aerospace-grade titanium design, and up to a week of battery life. It's a thoughtful pick for anyone who loves a little innovation woven into their daily routine.

Available in a range of finishes, including a redesigned Gold and the new Deep Rose, Oura Ring 5 is made to complement your personal style without getting in the way. Consider it a gift that looks good, works hard, and offers something useful long after the holiday season.

SHANNON'S FAVORITE

The best gifts make everyday life feel a little more effortless.

UPALEE's Victory sneaker brings a fresh perspective to a familiar essential, pairing thoughtful design with a few clever details that make a real difference. Its patented ZeroTie™ technology allows you to step in and adjust the fit completely hands-free, while the soft suede and microfiber upper, cushioned midsole, and supportive outsole keep comfort in focus. It's a welcome upgrade for anyone who appreciates good design, practical innovation, and a shoe they'll reach for long after the holidays are over.

Available in a range of colorways, the Victory is designed to move easily between everyday plans and wherever the day happens to take you. It's a gift that balances a little ingenuity with the kind of comfort that never goes out of style.
